LOCAL MATTERS

WEATHER PROBABILITIES.—For this section fair tonight and Wednesday; light northerly winds, becoming variable.

SUNDAY NIGHT'S ACCIDENT, -- The bodies of the two men who were killed Pennsylvania passenger train o'clock Sunday night, have been identified as those of James Sullivan and John Newcomb. The latter was while wating on the tracks near the south end of the Long Bridge for an electric car. The train which struck the men did not stop in Jackson City, and it is supposed that the engineer was unaware of the fatility. Shortly after the train passed one of the railroad watchmen at the south end of the law thinks for the month of the law thinks for the south end of the Long bridge found some evidences of an accident and began a search for the body of the person who had been struck. Fully 2,000 feet from the spot where he made the discovery of the blood upon the track be found the bodies of the two men lying in a pool of water. Death bad evidently resulted instantly, both bodies being terribly mutilated. Early yesterday morning Justice Stavenson of the county went to Jackson City, summoned a jury, and, after viewing the bodies, prepared to hold the inquest. As there were no witnesses to the ac-cident and as no official information had been secured from any source con-cerning it, the inquest was postponed until this morning. Newcomb is sur-vived by a widowand two sons, George and William, the latter a soldier on duty in the Philippines. The jury was of the opinion that the death of the two men was the result of an accident, and it was probable they were struck by a Chesapeake and Onio train.
